

Risk and safety instruction for groups

Adventure Stations Hellenthal

group _____ date _____

The adventure-based learning program which your group will participate in also includes the learning field indoor climbing/artificial climbing facility.

This field of learning is also designed as a 'zero error activity'. This means that we have carefully thought through and prepared the activities in advance, in accordance with the highest recognized standards, so that nothing can happen to the participants, both physically and psychologically.

Despite all our care, there are risks we can't completely eliminate. These risks are also the responsibility of your participants during the individual activities. The trainers inform your participants at the beginning of the activities in the rope garden about the risks and how the participants can contribute to the fact that the risks don't lead to injuries.

You confirm by your signature that the participants of your group have been sufficiently informed by the responsible trainers at the beginning of the activities in the climbing hall / artificial climbing system of the following risks and the appropriate handling of them.

Risks	Risk management
Injuries caused by falling objects (equipment, ...)	' Be alert and look up. Never run through under a climber in action. '
Hair, clothing or jewellery that can get caught up in rope rolls or other parts of the rope garden	' Tie long hair together. Put down jewellery and watches and wear attached clothing. Piercings must also be removed or taped off. '
Injuries or complaints caused by poorly adjusted or open seatbelts or carabiners	' Put the seat belts as safe as possible according to the instructions and check before each exercise that they have not loosened. Let the laid-out belts be checked by at least two TN and one trainer. '
Scratches and cuts	' Climb within your abilities. Move slowly and calmly. Wear protective clothing. '

Declaration

I have read the risks listed above and how to deal with them on behalf of the participants in my group.

I confirm by my signature that the participants of my group were sufficiently informed by the responsible Coaches at the beginning of the activities in the rope garden about the above risks and the corresponding handling of them.

It is clear to me that in the event of violations of these risk and safety teachings, individual participants in this group can be excluded from further activities in the rope garden.
